

RAIDED MEETING.

Twelve Union Market Police Quickly Scatter 400 Reds.

Inflammatory Speeches Were Being Delivered in a Synagogue.

Police Do Not Propose to Let Them Make Trouble.

There was pandemonium among the Anarchists again this afternoon when twelve bluecoats from the Union Market station routed 400 Reds from the Clinton Street Synagogue in the midst of a red-hot meeting.

It was a wild scene, and the street resounded with the frightened shouts of the Reds, who scattered like chaff before a whirlwind.

An earlier meeting, held at 71 Suffolk street, was broken up by the Socialists, who left the hall because several Reds insisted upon preaching the doctrine of Anarchy.

It was announced that the meeting would be resumed at the synagogue in Clinton street, near Houston, which is in Capt. Siebert's precinct.

At 2 o'clock the hall was packed, and a man named Kalich mounted the platform and opened the meeting with a brief but somewhat violent speech. It was followed by Adolph Ury, one of the leaders of the "Cloakmakers' Union," who took occasion to denounce everything but anarchy, particularly the Socialists, who he said were in league with the police, and were conspiring against the actually starving people.

Then a young girl apparently twenty years old, dressed in plain black, took the platform. She was Pauline Segel, Emma Goldman's niece. She spoke in a violent tirade against the police.

"They have no right," she said, "to hunt you from place to place as if you were savages."

"Stand your ground! You have a right to protest against the police," she said, "and if it becomes necessary to spill blood to maintain your rights do so."

Some one on the platform nudged the speaker and she cut short her speech and came down to the door.

The echo of her voice had scarcely died away before Capt. Siebert, in citizen's clothes, entered.

A moment later twelve policemen, big, strapping fellows, marched into the hall with drawn clubs.

Miss Segel was the first to escape. She picked up her skirts and skedaddled across the street and up First avenue in a manner that would do credit to an amateur sprinter.

Her blood-thirsty advice was not heeded by her listeners, who knocked each other down in their wild flight from the hall.

In less than a minute it was all over, and the street was cleared.

TO CALL ON THE MAYOR.

The Reds To-Day Appoint a Committee to Demand Work.

When Capt. Devery, of the Eldridge street police station, undertook to suppress Anarchy by warning the proprietors of all concert halls, and all other places where the Reds held their meetings, that they would be held responsible for any trouble that might occur, they were not at all deterred.

There is scarcely a block in all this precinct that has not two or three meeting places—saloons with back parlors, from which the proprietors preach, and the owners of which are admitted in sympathy with the Reds.

While the more respectable of the liquor dealers will obey the Captain's order, to the letter, there are others who will do what they can to hoodwink the police.

This was made apparent this morning when the Reds had everything in readiness to hold a meeting at Miller's Hall, 71 Suffolk street. Like the place raided yesterday at 71 Suffolk street, Miller's Hall is a basement saloon with a large room for meeting purposes in the rear. It is located in Capt. Eakin's precinct.

Consent had recently been given by the proprietors of the house, and it was given out that the meeting would be held at 7 o'clock. A large number of the Reds were present, and they were not at all deterred by the police.

Capt. Eakin, however, got wind of the affair almost as soon as the meeting was given out, and he promptly decided to checkmate it. Telling a dozen or more of his men to go to the place in uniform and dress in citizen's attire, he sent them down to the place in two batches of three.

William Colby and Patrolman John Kelly in uniform down to Suffolk street to arrest the speaker.

The Reds, who have the police station watched almost constantly, quickly learned of what was going on, and in order was given out countering the first one. That was the reason why when the roundsmen got to the place only a few men were to be seen.

The meeting had put in an appearance. The police, however, still remained on duty.

Later in the day about seventy-five men assembled at the meeting, and they promised to be orderly, the roundsmen allowed them to hold a meeting.

The roundsmen promptly began to abuse the police, and advised his hearers not to take free bread or soup from any one that they were not to beg, but to demand work.

It was finally decided to appoint a committee to wait upon Mayor Gilroy and demand work. They will also ask a permit to parade through the streets.

Capt. Eakin said he thought there would not be any trouble, and that the Reds were not to be violent as the Anarchists who trouble Capt. Devery. So long as they act peacefully, he said, he would not disturb them.

The meeting had scarcely broken up and the men gone over to the synagogue on Clinton street, when the police came to the door and arrested several of the men.

Miss Segel entered the saloon, and asked what had become of the meeting. When she told Emma Goldman that it had been broken up, she was very much disappointed.

Both then drove away.

Rumors of all this were affixed all over the east side as the next move to be made by the Anarchists was to hold a meeting at the Union Market.

One particularly wild story which gained considerable credence was that the Reds were to march to the city hall, and look for trouble in the near future.

It was a policeman who first informed an "Evening World" reporter this morning about it. He said he had been told by an Anarchist who had given the police valuable information before, and he was satisfied there was something in it.

According to the story, the 5,000 are not coming from Chicago direct.

Many of them, it was said, would be picked up on the way, while others would be being taken in order to avert suspicion.

Some color was given to this story by the fact that at the meeting which the police raided in Stanton street yesterday, speakers from New York, Philadelphia and other places had been announced. It was even said this morning that some of the Chicago Anarchists who left there four days ago are even now being taken in order to avert suspicion.

Commanders of precincts adjoining that of Capt. Devery are on the anxious watch for the coming of the Reds. The Eldridge street precinct, the Anarchists will spread themselves over adjacent territory and make out of it a headquarters. The men under Capt. Devery, of the Fifth Street Precinct, both captains have fully made up their mind what to do at the first outbreak. Rioting of any kind will be suppressed, and incendiary talk will not be tolerated.

In case it is found that the Anarchists contemplate giving up their old haunts and coming into adjoining precincts, orders similar to those issued by Capt. Devery as to the closing of the precincts will be issued.

The place, 11 Pike street, which is the headquarters of the Anarchists, is in Capt. Stevenson's precinct, and the captain is watching it carefully.

There was no excitement of any kind there this morning, and the only man who stood on guard duty at either of the headquarters, nevertheless Emma Goldman addressed a meeting there last night.

At the headquarters of the Hebrew Trades Union, 91 Delancey street, there was a meeting of the Anarchists this morning. They were principally Socialists, and the main subject of discussion was the interference of the Anarchists at the meeting in Pike street.

Joseph Barondessa, who has failed to gain recognition as the leader of the unemployed, and who has been arrested several times, was the speaker. He said that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class.

Secretary Jacob Milch declared to an "Evening World" reporter that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class. He said that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class.

At 2 o'clock the hall was packed, and a man named Kalich mounted the platform and opened the meeting with a brief but somewhat violent speech. It was followed by Adolph Ury, one of the leaders of the "Cloakmakers' Union," who took occasion to denounce everything but anarchy, particularly the Socialists, who he said were in league with the police, and were conspiring against the actually starving people.

RAIDED MEETING.

Twelve Union Market Police Quickly Scatter 400 Reds.

Inflammatory Speeches Were Being Delivered in a Synagogue.

Police Do Not Propose to Let Them Make Trouble.

There was pandemonium among the Anarchists again this afternoon when twelve bluecoats from the Union Market station routed 400 Reds from the Clinton Street Synagogue in the midst of a red-hot meeting.

It was a wild scene, and the street resounded with the frightened shouts of the Reds, who scattered like chaff before a whirlwind.

An earlier meeting, held at 71 Suffolk street, was broken up by the Socialists, who left the hall because several Reds insisted upon preaching the doctrine of Anarchy.

It was announced that the meeting would be resumed at the synagogue in Clinton street, near Houston, which is in Capt. Siebert's precinct.

At 2 o'clock the hall was packed, and a man named Kalich mounted the platform and opened the meeting with a brief but somewhat violent speech. It was followed by Adolph Ury, one of the leaders of the "Cloakmakers' Union," who took occasion to denounce everything but anarchy, particularly the Socialists, who he said were in league with the police, and were conspiring against the actually starving people.

Then a young girl apparently twenty years old, dressed in plain black, took the platform. She was Pauline Segel, Emma Goldman's niece. She spoke in a violent tirade against the police.

"They have no right," she said, "to hunt you from place to place as if you were savages."

"Stand your ground! You have a right to protest against the police," she said, "and if it becomes necessary to spill blood to maintain your rights do so."

Some one on the platform nudged the speaker and she cut short her speech and came down to the door.

The echo of her voice had scarcely died away before Capt. Siebert, in citizen's clothes, entered.

A moment later twelve policemen, big, strapping fellows, marched into the hall with drawn clubs.

Miss Segel was the first to escape. She picked up her skirts and skedaddled across the street and up First avenue in a manner that would do credit to an amateur sprinter.

Her blood-thirsty advice was not heeded by her listeners, who knocked each other down in their wild flight from the hall.

In less than a minute it was all over, and the street was cleared.

TO CALL ON THE MAYOR.

The Reds To-Day Appoint a Committee to Demand Work.

When Capt. Devery, of the Eldridge street police station, undertook to suppress Anarchy by warning the proprietors of all concert halls, and all other places where the Reds held their meetings, that they would be held responsible for any trouble that might occur, they were not at all deterred.

There is scarcely a block in all this precinct that has not two or three meeting places—saloons with back parlors, from which the proprietors preach, and the owners of which are admitted in sympathy with the Reds.

While the more respectable of the liquor dealers will obey the Captain's order, to the letter, there are others who will do what they can to hoodwink the police.

This was made apparent this morning when the Reds had everything in readiness to hold a meeting at Miller's Hall, 71 Suffolk street. Like the place raided yesterday at 71 Suffolk street, Miller's Hall is a basement saloon with a large room for meeting purposes in the rear. It is located in Capt. Eakin's precinct.

Consent had recently been given by the proprietors of the house, and it was given out that the meeting would be held at 7 o'clock. A large number of the Reds were present, and they were not at all deterred by the police.

Capt. Eakin, however, got wind of the affair almost as soon as the meeting was given out, and he promptly decided to checkmate it. Telling a dozen or more of his men to go to the place in uniform and dress in citizen's attire, he sent them down to the place in two batches of three.

William Colby and Patrolman John Kelly in uniform down to Suffolk street to arrest the speaker.

The Reds, who have the police station watched almost constantly, quickly learned of what was going on, and in order was given out countering the first one. That was the reason why when the roundsmen got to the place only a few men were to be seen.

The meeting had put in an appearance. The police, however, still remained on duty.

Later in the day about seventy-five men assembled at the meeting, and they promised to be orderly, the roundsmen allowed them to hold a meeting.

The roundsmen promptly began to abuse the police, and advised his hearers not to take free bread or soup from any one that they were not to beg, but to demand work.

It was finally decided to appoint a committee to wait upon Mayor Gilroy and demand work. They will also ask a permit to parade through the streets.

Capt. Eakin said he thought there would not be any trouble, and that the Reds were not to be violent as the Anarchists who trouble Capt. Devery. So long as they act peacefully, he said, he would not disturb them.

The meeting had scarcely broken up and the men gone over to the synagogue on Clinton street, when the police came to the door and arrested several of the men.

Miss Segel entered the saloon, and asked what had become of the meeting. When she told Emma Goldman that it had been broken up, she was very much disappointed.

Both then drove away.

Rumors of all this were affixed all over the east side as the next move to be made by the Anarchists was to hold a meeting at the Union Market.

One particularly wild story which gained considerable credence was that the Reds were to march to the city hall, and look for trouble in the near future.

It was a policeman who first informed an "Evening World" reporter this morning about it. He said he had been told by an Anarchist who had given the police valuable information before, and he was satisfied there was something in it.

According to the story, the 5,000 are not coming from Chicago direct.

Many of them, it was said, would be picked up on the way, while others would be being taken in order to avert suspicion.

Some color was given to this story by the fact that at the meeting which the police raided in Stanton street yesterday, speakers from New York, Philadelphia and other places had been announced. It was even said this morning that some of the Chicago Anarchists who left there four days ago are even now being taken in order to avert suspicion.

Commanders of precincts adjoining that of Capt. Devery are on the anxious watch for the coming of the Reds. The Eldridge street precinct, the Anarchists will spread themselves over adjacent territory and make out of it a headquarters. The men under Capt. Devery, of the Fifth Street Precinct, both captains have fully made up their mind what to do at the first outbreak. Rioting of any kind will be suppressed, and incendiary talk will not be tolerated.

In case it is found that the Anarchists contemplate giving up their old haunts and coming into adjoining precincts, orders similar to those issued by Capt. Devery as to the closing of the precincts will be issued.

The place, 11 Pike street, which is the headquarters of the Anarchists, is in Capt. Stevenson's precinct, and the captain is watching it carefully.

There was no excitement of any kind there this morning, and the only man who stood on guard duty at either of the headquarters, nevertheless Emma Goldman addressed a meeting there last night.

At the headquarters of the Hebrew Trades Union, 91 Delancey street, there was a meeting of the Anarchists this morning. They were principally Socialists, and the main subject of discussion was the interference of the Anarchists at the meeting in Pike street.

Joseph Barondessa, who has failed to gain recognition as the leader of the unemployed, and who has been arrested several times, was the speaker. He said that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class.

Secretary Jacob Milch declared to an "Evening World" reporter that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class. He said that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class.

At 2 o'clock the hall was packed, and a man named Kalich mounted the platform and opened the meeting with a brief but somewhat violent speech. It was followed by Adolph Ury, one of the leaders of the "Cloakmakers' Union," who took occasion to denounce everything but anarchy, particularly the Socialists, who he said were in league with the police, and were conspiring against the actually starving people.

Then a young girl apparently twenty years old, dressed in plain black, took the platform. She was Pauline Segel, Emma Goldman's niece. She spoke in a violent tirade against the police.

"They have no right," she said, "to hunt you from place to place as if you were savages."

RAIDED MEETING.

Twelve Union Market Police Quickly Scatter 400 Reds.

Inflammatory Speeches Were Being Delivered in a Synagogue.

Police Do Not Propose to Let Them Make Trouble.

There was pandemonium among the Anarchists again this afternoon when twelve bluecoats from the Union Market station routed 400 Reds from the Clinton Street Synagogue in the midst of a red-hot meeting.

It was a wild scene, and the street resounded with the frightened shouts of the Reds, who scattered like chaff before a whirlwind.

An earlier meeting, held at 71 Suffolk street, was broken up by the Socialists, who left the hall because several Reds insisted upon preaching the doctrine of Anarchy.

It was announced that the meeting would be resumed at the synagogue in Clinton street, near Houston, which is in Capt. Siebert's precinct.

At 2 o'clock the hall was packed, and a man named Kalich mounted the platform and opened the meeting with a brief but somewhat violent speech. It was followed by Adolph Ury, one of the leaders of the "Cloakmakers' Union," who took occasion to denounce everything but anarchy, particularly the Socialists, who he said were in league with the police, and were conspiring against the actually starving people.

Then a young girl apparently twenty years old, dressed in plain black, took the platform. She was Pauline Segel, Emma Goldman's niece. She spoke in a violent tirade against the police.

"They have no right," she said, "to hunt you from place to place as if you were savages."

"Stand your ground! You have a right to protest against the police," she said, "and if it becomes necessary to spill blood to maintain your rights do so."

Some one on the platform nudged the speaker and she cut short her speech and came down to the door.

The echo of her voice had scarcely died away before Capt. Siebert, in citizen's clothes, entered.

A moment later twelve policemen, big, strapping fellows, marched into the hall with drawn clubs.

Miss Segel was the first to escape. She picked up her skirts and skedaddled across the street and up First avenue in a manner that would do credit to an amateur sprinter.

Her blood-thirsty advice was not heeded by her listeners, who knocked each other down in their wild flight from the hall.

In less than a minute it was all over, and the street was cleared.

TO CALL ON THE MAYOR.

The Reds To-Day Appoint a Committee to Demand Work.

When Capt. Devery, of the Eldridge street police station, undertook to suppress Anarchy by warning the proprietors of all concert halls, and all other places where the Reds held their meetings, that they would be held responsible for any trouble that might occur, they were not at all deterred.

There is scarcely a block in all this precinct that has not two or three meeting places—saloons with back parlors, from which the proprietors preach, and the owners of which are admitted in sympathy with the Reds.

While the more respectable of the liquor dealers will obey the Captain's order, to the letter, there are others who will do what they can to hoodwink the police.

This was made apparent this morning when the Reds had everything in readiness to hold a meeting at Miller's Hall, 71 Suffolk street. Like the place raided yesterday at 71 Suffolk street, Miller's Hall is a basement saloon with a large room for meeting purposes in the rear. It is located in Capt. Eakin's precinct.

Consent had recently been given by the proprietors of the house, and it was given out that the meeting would be held at 7 o'clock. A large number of the Reds were present, and they were not at all deterred by the police.

Capt. Eakin, however, got wind of the affair almost as soon as the meeting was given out, and he promptly decided to checkmate it. Telling a dozen or more of his men to go to the place in uniform and dress in citizen's attire, he sent them down to the place in two batches of three.

William Colby and Patrolman John Kelly in uniform down to Suffolk street to arrest the speaker.

The Reds, who have the police station watched almost constantly, quickly learned of what was going on, and in order was given out countering the first one. That was the reason why when the roundsmen got to the place only a few men were to be seen.

The meeting had put in an appearance. The police, however, still remained on duty.

Later in the day about seventy-five men assembled at the meeting, and they promised to be orderly, the roundsmen allowed them to hold a meeting.

The roundsmen promptly began to abuse the police, and advised his hearers not to take free bread or soup from any one that they were not to beg, but to demand work.

It was finally decided to appoint a committee to wait upon Mayor Gilroy and demand work. They will also ask a permit to parade through the streets.

Capt. Eakin said he thought there would not be any trouble, and that the Reds were not to be violent as the Anarchists who trouble Capt. Devery. So long as they act peacefully, he said, he would not disturb them.

The meeting had scarcely broken up and the men gone over to the synagogue on Clinton street, when the police came to the door and arrested several of the men.

Miss Segel entered the saloon, and asked what had become of the meeting. When she told Emma Goldman that it had been broken up, she was very much disappointed.

Both then drove away.

Rumors of all this were affixed all over the east side as the next move to be made by the Anarchists was to hold a meeting at the Union Market.

One particularly wild story which gained considerable credence was that the Reds were to march to the city hall, and look for trouble in the near future.

It was a policeman who first informed an "Evening World" reporter this morning about it. He said he had been told by an Anarchist who had given the police valuable information before, and he was satisfied there was something in it.

According to the story, the 5,000 are not coming from Chicago direct.

Many of them, it was said, would be picked up on the way, while others would be being taken in order to avert suspicion.

Some color was given to this story by the fact that at the meeting which the police raided in Stanton street yesterday, speakers from New York, Philadelphia and other places had been announced. It was even said this morning that some of the Chicago Anarchists who left there four days ago are even now being taken in order to avert suspicion.

Commanders of precincts adjoining that of Capt. Devery are on the anxious watch for the coming of the Reds. The Eldridge street precinct, the Anarchists will spread themselves over adjacent territory and make out of it a headquarters. The men under Capt. Devery, of the Fifth Street Precinct, both captains have fully made up their mind what to do at the first outbreak. Rioting of any kind will be suppressed, and incendiary talk will not be tolerated.

In case it is found that the Anarchists contemplate giving up their old haunts and coming into adjoining precincts, orders similar to those issued by Capt. Devery as to the closing of the precincts will be issued.

The place, 11 Pike street, which is the headquarters of the Anarchists, is in Capt. Stevenson's precinct, and the captain is watching it carefully.

There was no excitement of any kind there this morning, and the only man who stood on guard duty at either of the headquarters, nevertheless Emma Goldman addressed a meeting there last night.

At the headquarters of the Hebrew Trades Union, 91 Delancey street, there was a meeting of the Anarchists this morning. They were principally Socialists, and the main subject of discussion was the interference of the Anarchists at the meeting in Pike street.

Joseph Barondessa, who has failed to gain recognition as the leader of the unemployed, and who has been arrested several times, was the speaker. He said that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class.

Secretary Jacob Milch declared to an "Evening World" reporter that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class. He said that the Anarchists were not to be trusted by the honest, peaceable class.

At 2 o'clock the hall was packed, and a man named Kalich mounted the platform and opened the meeting with a brief but somewhat violent speech. It was followed by Adolph Ury, one of the leaders of the "Cloakmakers' Union," who took occasion to denounce everything but anarchy, particularly the Socialists, who he said were in league with the police, and were conspiring against the actually starving people.

Then a young girl apparently twenty years old, dressed in plain black, took the platform. She was Pauline Segel, Emma Goldman's niece. She spoke in a violent tirade against the police.

"They have no right," she said, "to hunt you from place to place as if you were savages."

H.K. THURBER AWAY.

His Absence Leads to Charges of His Having Fled.

The Allegations Are Made in a $4,000 Lawsuit.

His Lawyer Denies Their Truth and Makes an Explanation.

It is charged in papers on file in the Supreme Court that Horace K. Thurber has left the State for the purpose of avoiding his creditors and to prevent any papers being served upon him in actions brought against him.

The action in which the allegations are made is brought by the Continental National Bank of Boston, against the National Bank Company, the Seaside Publishing Company, Edward Lange, John W. Lovell and Horace K. Thurber to recover $4,000, with interest from February last, upon a bill of exchange or draft drawn by the Bank Company, directed to the Publishing Company and endorsed by Thurber, Lange and Lovell.

Upon the application of Lawyers Hornblower, Byrne and Taylor, Presiding Justice Van Brunt, of the Supreme Court, this afternoon granted an order for the service of the papers in the case upon Mr. Thurber by leaving them at his residence or tacking them on the door, affidavits being presented to the effect that nothing definite can be ascertained as to his whereabouts.

The affidavits setting forth the facts as to the non-appearance of Mr. Thurber and the inability to ascertain where he is or where he can be served with any papers are made by Howard A. Taylor, Mark W. Taylor, Henry K. Davis and George M. Hamilton.

Mr. Thurber was the President of the United States Book Company and Mr. Lange was its treasurer when the company was incorporated in New York in January last.

When the habeas corpus proceedings in the case of Sophia Marasca were being heard before Justice Bartlett in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning, John A. Quintard, attorney for the Charities Department, was not present. Counselor Cora, for the petitioner, said that Dr. Ira O. Tracy, of the Flatbush branch of the court, was the only person present for the county.

Justice Bartlett was angry at this. He said that the Charities Department, having a counsel, should send a doctor to the court to practice law, and that a judge would have to practice medicine.

Mr. Quintard said that the Charities Department was not a doctor, and that a judge would have to practice medicine.

Mr. Quintard said that the Charities Department was not a doctor, and that a judge would have to practice medicine.

Mr. Quintard said that the Charities Department was not a doctor, and that a judge would have to practice medicine.

Mr. Quintard said that the Charities Department was not a doctor, and that a judge would have to practice medicine.